Dynamic, Riveting, every teenager needs to see it.

Rev. Medric Mills, III

Knowing some of my friends at school who struggle with guy problems, and for those who aren't saved struggling with drugs and what not, this play was inspiring because it gives one a chance to see a different approach to handling their situations.

Crystal Chiles, 17

The play tells a real life story. Young people of today will definitely be able to connect with the storyline and the characters, even if they are not in that situation I am sure they know of someone who may be dealing with the situation. Also, the play is good as an evangelism tool in that it is good to see young people reaching out to their peers and friends.

Tanecia Moore, Mt. Pleasant Baptist Church

I believe that the play was based on issues that teens deal with in these days, how peer-pressure affects us and the questions teens have as to whether or not God is real. The play shows how we don't know that tomorrow is not promised to us, until someone loses their life.

Rashida Bush, 16 Disciples International

Black Lights Shining in the Darkness is a must see stage play that will keep you on the edge of your seat wanting more. Each scene depicts a day in the life of an urban teen and their need for a place that will help them find their identity in this dark world. This play is like no other in that it is good for all ages, and it opens the door for dialog between teens and adults.
